THE HELPLESS CHILDRES.

Possibly the cool weather blunts the minds of people to the trials which afflict mick children during the Summer heats. They can't be suffering very much from the temperature when it is as low as this.

But the torrid waves in this climate do not approach stealthily and gradually They break with full force on the town and inundate it at once with stiflingly hot air. Then poor children with any ailment wearing their puny bodies suffer intensely. Then is the time when an Everyon Worth Free Doctor should anpear upon the scene like an angel of

Where a Cabman's Strike Caused the Earl of Aberdeen to Ride. By a train which left Euston Station. London, and arrived at the Caledonian Station, Edinburgh, at 7.30 o'clock a. M., the Earl of Aberdeen was a passenger, says the Pall Mall Garette.

In ordinary circumstances, his valet, who also travelled in the train, would have secured a cab and despatched his Lordship to the club, following himself in another vehicle as soon as he had coltected the luggage.

But to the surprise of the Earl and the dismay of the valet, owing to the strike of cabmen, not a cab was to be seen. For a minute or two his lordship was nonplussed, but leaving the valet to mount guard over the baggage he sallied forth in search of a cab, Prince's street, Lothian road and the neighboring streets

EST COMPOSITE NOVEL.

From Smith, Gray & Co 's Muschly, 1
Wife—Tell me, Reginald, doar, what made you love and marry me ? Her Husband-I fell in love with you at Suiggers's party, when the waiter spilled a whole dish of ice-cream over your slik dress. You smiled so awastly, though you knew your dress was runned, that I made up my mind I never had seen so augelie a woman. She—Ha! ha! Is it possible. Why, I never was so vexed in my life. I want home and unset the whole family. You just ought to have heard how I went on. 400
